HAZEL GREEN.

REDDEN, OF THE MT. STERLING GAZETTE, DOES HER HANDSOMELY.

A Column and More of Condensed Communications to our Citizens and Their Business Enterprise.

Hazel Green, with its name in the history of Kentucky or a mere speck on the State map bears very little indication of what it is except being a mountain town; and in order that the country may know something of this enterprising inland town of Eastern Kentucky, we give the following true sketch:

It is located on the headwaters of Red River, down which stream to the Kentucky River and thence to Lumber markets, on its banks are untold thousands of feet of the best timber known, shipped with every tide. It is also on the line of the proposed extension of the Ky. & E. R. R., and has a population of 300, who are just waiting, content with their surroundings, for railroad facilities, when Hazel Green will become one of the leading business points of Eastern Kentucky. Its very location at the base of the rich inexhaustible mountain range which divides the waters of the Licking and Red Rivers, bounded on all sides by fertile and productive farming lands, with the greatest abundance of water for manufacturing purposes, and contiguous in every direction to the greatest supply of the finest coal, bituminous and coking coal, mica in operative quantities, fine building stone and the highest priced walnut and white pine known in the United States. It is from here that walnut-trees, purchased at $300 standing, have been, are now being transported to foreign markets and sold at fine profits.
No point in this or any State is more favorable located for a growing town.

In the West towns arise, people lose their heads, in a few months are tied up with all they have and a panic is unavoidable, because they are wanting in essentials for continued prosperity. Not so with Hazel Green. She has all that other towns have and more, except the outlets, which are sure to come and that in the near future. As a proof of the foregoing we will view the towns as it is.
Under the proprietorship of H. Turtle, the traveling public have a very good hotel. Every traveler receives his personal attention, and all their wants are supplied.
Their rooms are neat and comfortable and the table is supplied with all the appetite of man ought to desire. It is a No. 1 hotel and is known as the Blue House.

J. H. Blenner, the jolly, mirthful energetic, sharp horse man of the mountain district, has charge of the livery business of the town, and it is certainly in competent hands.

The mile from Hazel Green are the famous Swango Springs which are growing in favor each succeeding year, and water from them is being shipped all over the country, and its medicinal properties are very fine and invigorating.
In order to make these Springs profitable both to the invalid world and Hazel Green it is absolutely necessary that they pass into hands that will improve and beautify and put up a hotel sufficient to accommodate their patronage. The Messrs. Swango, who now have control of them, are excellent gentlemen, and do the very best they can with their present accommodations, but they have not capital enough to place them before the people. Judge G. B. Swango has discovered on his farm two and a half miles distant, waters similar to these, and other medicinal waters have numerous outlets in this vicinity, sufficient to make Hazel Green attractive on their account.

Flouring, saw and gristmills, churches, school buildings and store rooms are sufficient for the present demands. J. T. and Floyd Day, composing the firm of J. T. & F. Day are known as the merchants kings of the mountains, and carry a mind stock of merchandise that will insure the year round from $25,000 to $30,000, and their yearly sales will aggregate $80,000. They carry dry goods, notions, groceries, hardware, farming implements, drugs, furniture, saddlery, clothing, general merchandise, hats and caps, boots and shoes and millinery, and each branch has a distinct apartment.
From this stock they supply fifteen country stores, two of which belong to them.
They are also stock traders and own large tracts of land in Wolfe and other counties.

Judge G. B. Swango, County Judge of Wolfe county, resides here and conducts a profitable general store, supplying log dealers and taking in exchange products. His business is prosperous, and as a man and officer, he stands high both with his own people and wherever known.

McGuire & Rose is the name of another firm, dealers in general merchandise, and with a large and clean stock sell for cash and produce, logs, stock, etc., as the firms above named. Mr.
McGuire gives his entire attention to this line of business and has built up a remunerative trade. John M. Rose, his partner, is School Commissioner, and both as an officer and business man stands high.

W. T. Caskey makes the fourth merchant of the town. He occupies a beautiful and neat room, and his stock is in keeping with the appearance of his home.
Popular, quick and energetic, he is one of the leading men of the town and his counsel is desired on all important measures. He is a success in all his undertakings, and like the other merchants of the town is making money.

This is the home of Hon. W. O. Mize, an ex-State Senator, a man of intelligence, a true Democrat and at present an applicant for the Assistant Clerkship of the Senate, and if our knowledge is correct, is the only applicant
